

It depends on how you look at it...

Tues 20th May 2008, 6.30-9.00pm | The Hub

It depends on how you look at it...

This high-energy workshop will use techniques from theatre to engage participants in a three-part show using the following sustainability and strategy tools: Edward de Bono's Thinking Hats, Ken Wilber's Integral Lenses, and Don Beck's Ecological-Selves.

These tools are fabulous for:

- * Enabling teams to think together, with an increase in the depth and power of the thinking.
- * Ensuring all perspectives on a challenge are considered. Fuller understanding makes for better decisions.
- * Enhancing innovation through structured means of flexibility and lateral thinking.

The workshop will be led by Dawn Fleming and Andrew Outhwaite from LearningHouse. We will provide all participants with hand-outs and resources, and follow-up afterwards to support use of these tools in your life and work!

Roll up, roll up

The show starts at 18:30 sharp, and you are the main act, so please arrive from 18:15 if you want to take part! The workshop runs for 2.5 hours, finishing at 21:00.

Register by sending an email to us with your:

- name
- organisation
- contact number (pref. mobile)
- postcode

Email: info@learninghouse.biz

Phone: 02077049347

Web: www.learninghouse.biz/contact.htm

Venue: The Hub, Islington. 5 Torrens Street, London EC1V 1NQ. Within Candid Arts. Four flights up. Two minutes from Angel tube.

Map: <http://tinyurl.com/fy9lp>

Seeking fresh insights into tough challenges?

Many of us want to create positive change in our communities, organisations or relationships. Seeing the challenges from new perspectives can reveal new opportunities and improve your effectiveness and creativity.

In partnership with:

thehub

www.learninghouse.biz | where learning and innovation live

